REDWOOD CITY, SAN MATEO COUNTY, CALIF., SATURDAY, AUGUST 7, 1926.

PENDENT AND TOWN BOARD WOMAN ENDS OWN LIFE

Dependent caused by continuing illness, Mrs. Rowan, who was the wife of a man who had been in the service of the city, was found dead in her home on Monday morning. The body was found by a neighbor who called the police. Mrs. Rowan had been in the hospital for several weeks and had been in the city for some time. The cause of death was determined to be a heart ailment.

TWO SUITS FILED FOR AUTO INJURIES

Two suits resulting from the auto accident which resulted in the death of Miss Ida Stafford of this city on February 13 were filed this morning in the Superior court here against P. A. Ryan, well known driver of this city and his son, Edward Ryan. The suits are for a total of $151,000 and are filed by the parents of the girl who was killed and by the mother of Francis Bridges, seriously injured at the time.

WOMAN HEAR REV. A. H. CLARK

Mrs. Rowan, who was the wife of a man who had been in the service of the city, was found dead in her home on Monday morning. The body was found by a neighbor who called the police. Mrs. Rowan had been in the hospital for several weeks and had been in the city for some time. The cause of death was determined to be a heart ailment.

ROADWAY BARBER SHOP IN NEW LOCATION MONDAY

Thompson's barber shop will move Monday from its present location in the Gardiner block on Broadway to the place across the street. The new location is a modern building with a large room for customers and a comfortable waiting room.

EMILIANI LAY DEPUTY

Emiliani, who was a deputy sheriff, was found dead in his home on Monday morning. The body was found by a neighbor who called the police. Emiliani had been in the hospital for several weeks and had been in the city for some time. The cause of death was determined to be a heart ailment.

TRAFFIC OFFICER CUT WHEN CAR HITS TRUCK

Douglas Goulson, traffic officer of this county, received minor cuts when the car in which he was riding collided with a large oil tank truck at San Carlos. The car was badly damaged but none of the passengers were injured. Goulson's injuries proved to be superficial.

MAN AND WOMAN INJURED WHEN STRUCK BY MOTOR

Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Brown of this city received some slight injuries Saturday evening when struck by a motorcycle when crossing the highway. The machine was operated by Lawrence Healy of Sunnyvale. Mr. and Mrs. Brown were treated at the Redwood City hospital.

POLICE OFFICERS SCARE WOULD BE BURGLARS

While making their rounds Wednesday evening Police Officers Sylvester Douglas and Clyde Genocchio spied two men endeavoring to force a rear window of Ryan's drug store on Main street, near Pine street. The officers were able to see the burglars by means of a spot light. Before the police could be turned, however, the two men beat a hasty retreat leaving their tools behind them.

WOODSIDE

Woodside may have a Landmarks Association of its own. At least a movement in that direction has been initiated by Miss Marjorie Josselyn in her determined effort to save from the hands of wreckers the old Trippe store which is so intimately associated with the history of Woodside from the very earliest days.

RICHARDSON TO MEET WOMEN AT LUNCHEON

Governor Friend W. Richardson will meet the women of San Francisco and the entire Bay district at a luncheon in the roof garden of the Whitcomb hotel at 12:15 on Wednesday, August 11. Richardson-for-Governor campaign headquarters announced Wednesday. The governor will make the trip from Los Angeles to be present at the luncheon. It will be his first public appearance in San Francisco in connection with the campaign.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR THOMAS C. JOHNSTON

Funeral services were held Tuesday in Halfmoon Bay for Thomas C. Johnston, pioneer resident of the coastside, who passed away Saturday at Belmont after a protracted illness. Services were conducted by Rev. C. H. Stevens, pastor of the Congregational church in Lodi, and for many years pastor of the church here. Hundreds of friends of the deceased gathered at the Methodist church in Halfmoon Bay, where the services were conducted. Prof. Otis M. Carrington sang "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" during the services.

MAN AND WOMAN INJURED WHEN STRUCK BY MOTOR

Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Brown of this city received some slight injuries Saturday evening when struck by a motorcycle when crossing the highway. The machine was operated by Lawrence Healy of Sunnyvale. Mr. and Mrs. Brown were treated at the Redwood City hospital.

Sheriff M'Govern Hurt In Auto Crash

Sheriff M'Govern is recovering from injuries received Wednesday night when his car was completely demolished at San Bruno by another car. M'Govern, though thrown through the windshield of his car and falling thirty feet from where his car landed after the impact escaped with injuries, which while painful, will not prove serious.

CONTRACT IS AWARDED FOR UNDERPASS

The State Highway Commission has awarded a contract to Barrett and Hilt for the construction of the underpass at South San Francisco that will connect with the Bay Shore Highway. The amount of the contract is $226,283.10, the largest contract for this character of work ever paid by the highway commission.

CITY BRIEFS

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Witte and family have returned home after spending a fortnight motoring through the northern part of this state and in Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Stafford are enjoying a vacation in Vancouver, B. C.

BIG GAIN IN REGISTRATION OVER TWO YEARS AGO

County Clerk Elizabeth M. Knoese has finished the work of compiling the registration of the county which closed on July 31 for the primary election on August 31. There is a big gain over the registration of two years ago. The registration at the primaries in 1924 was 18,758 and this year it is 23,189. In 1882 the total vote of the county was only 1,657. Redwood City made the largest strides during the past two years. In 1924 the registration was 2,081 and now it is 2,866.

SOFT DRINK MERCHANT JAILED FOR DRUNKENNESS

Although he deals in soft drinks, Heidelberg Sandberg, proprietor of Sandberg's Barbecue, had more than soda pop in his constitution Thursday when booked at the jail here on a charge of disturbing the peace. Deputies Callahan and Larroco answered a call from the police to find that the cause of the disturbance was Sandberg in a state of intoxication.

DIVORCE DECREE GRANTED

An interlocutory divorce decree was granted in the Superior court here Wednesday to Mrs. Anna Phillips, charging cruelty against Burus Phillips, Pescadero hotel man. The wife, represented by Attorney Albert Mansfield, Redwood City, testified that she had been required to make beds in a Pescadero hotel and do other tasks beyond her strength. Phillips made no appearance in defense of the suit.

TELEPHONE DIRECTORY OF 1896 SHOWS 45 SUBSCRIBERS

Our old friend, Thomas Griffin, whose boyhood was spent in Redwood City, has given us a copy of the telephone directory of March, 1896 covering the states of California, Oregon and Washington. It is mute evidence of the way the telephone system has grown since that time. In the three states there were only 47,847 subscribers, while now there are nearly 1,000,000 in the state of California alone.

R. H. JURY, FORMER ASSEMBLYMAN WED

Last Tuesday R. H. Jury, former assemblyman from San Mateo county, was united in marriage to Miss Edna Rebecca Crow at Belmont. The ceremony was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Jury, 101 Chamberlain, P. P., Wells Fargo and General Merchandise.

WIFE OF S. M. CAPITALIST IS GIVEN ESTATE

Mrs. Gladys I. McNamara will receive the entire estate of her late husband, Nicholas J. McNamara, who was a San Mateo capitalist. It was revealed Tuesday when his will was filed for probate in the Superior court here. McNamara died July 13, 1926, following an operation.

BOARD HEARS ARGUMENTS OF INCORPORATION

Arguments in the matter of the proposed incorporation of Belmont as a city of the sixth class were heard by the board of supervisors last Monday, at which time the petition of 76 residents of that community was received as well as several protests.

PETTING PARTY ENDS IN HIGHWAY ROBBERY

Robbers along the shady highways of the county still continue to collect the amusement tax from enthusiasts of the gentle art of petting. The last victim of this peculiar profession was Mose Peterson of this city, who with a young woman, was parked by the side of the little frequented highway near Belmont Saturday night.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY TO FILE COMPLAINT

Within a few days District Attorney Franklin Swart will file complaint in abatement and injunctive relief in the Superior court, to clear Willow road, the thoroughfare that connects with the approach to the Dumbarton bridge, from all legal encumbrances so that Supervisor John MacBain may go on with the work of grading and macadamizing the thoroughfare. The suit no doubt will bring out opposition from abutting property owners on the east side of the road who claim an equity in the strip of land. The bridge will be finished next month and the promoters desire to have this road in readiness to accommodate the big travel over the span.

Elsinore, Hamlet's Town, Is 500 Years Old

Elsinore, the Danish city of Hamlet, recently held an elaborate festival to celebrate the five hundredth anniversary of the granting of the charter. Pageants recalling the history of the town were acted in the courtyard of Kronborg castle, where the "Taming of the Shrew" was also presented. This picture shows nuns following the effigy of a saint which is being carried by mail-clad knights.

Model of Seadrome That May Be Built in Atlantic

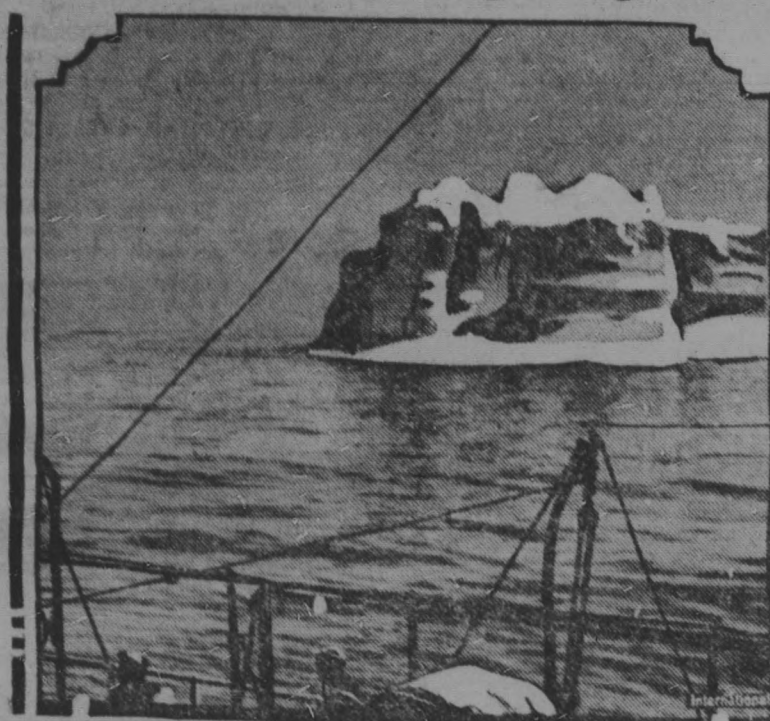

Above is pictured E. R. Armstrong, chief engineer of the Dupont company, with the elaborate model of his proposed seadrome, which he believes would solve the problem of transatlantic aerial travel. The drydock model would serve as a midocean harbor for ships and dirigibles which could land on the dock. In the model he uses a replica of the S. S. Majestic, showing the relative sizes of the dock and the ship.

RADIO

Thunderstorm Map of the United States.

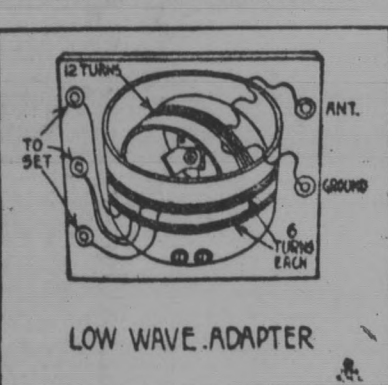

"It is not the sound of thunder that is heard in the radio set, but the actual wave that is propagated by the electric spark, or lightning flash," says R. Francis Dashiell, writing in the Radio Broadcast Magazine. "Thunder is merely the sound of the air as it rushes in to fill the space or vacuum made by the passing of the spark. Such a wave will be heard simultaneously with the visibility of the flash, but ahead of the sound of the thunder. Electromagnetic waves travel at the same speed as light waves, 299,725,000 meters, or 186,000 miles per second, while sound travels but approximately 1,000 feet per second. There are certain regions which produce more thunderstorms than others, and there are certain weather conditions, as shown by the daily weather map, favorable to the inception of thunderstorms. Purely local storms of a sporadic character may be caused by local regions of warm air within a high air pressure area and predominating clear sky. These give rise to local static only, last but a short time, and seldom cross over much territory."

Lightning Affects Set.
"Much static predominates, not only from the central low area itself, but from the mechanical action of the vigorous air currents. Lightning associated with such storms is very severe and spreads out over a large area, affecting radio receivers over many miles, often over a whole state or more. Thunderstorms occur in nearly all parts of the world, but the number decreases rapidly as we pass from the equator toward the pole. In the tropics, there are many places that average a thunderstorm for nearly every day of the year, while in the Far North but one or two storms may occur in the course of several years. Fewer storms occur over the ocean than over land, and mountainous regions have far more than the level plains. In the United States, the largest number occur over the Gulf states. In New England there occur but approximately one-fourth of the thunderstorms experienced along the coast, while at certain Pacific coast sections the proportion is very small as such storms are rare."

Attach Adapter for Low Waves on Super

There are many thousands of superheterodyne receivers in use, but practically all of them have been built for the reception of wave-lengths between 200 and 550 meters. Some of the large eastern stations are now transmitting regularly on the very low wave-lengths, and very often these stations can be picked up on the low waves when it is impossible to hear them on the regular wave-lengths.

The adapter shown is very simple and can be wound on the form of an old variocoupler, if you have one handy. A 3 by 3 bakelite or cardboard form can be used for the secondary winding and a 1 by 2 1/2 tube for the primary. Space-wind 12 turns of 24-gauge DCC wire for the primary and the same number of turns for the secondary. A large number of "supers" have a center tapped loop and the secondary of the adapter is arranged so that you can connect the center loop post on the set to it while the leads from the outside posts of the adapter go to the posts on the set that formerly connected to the outside leads on the loop. Where a two-lead loop is used, the center post is not used. The antenna and ground leads go to the two posts connected to the primary of the adapter.—Philadelphia Record.

Steady Current Is Good

A tube will give long service if the filament is operated at constant voltage and under conditions which prevent any increases in current.

Noises That Disturb Many Radio Listeners

Interfering noise originating outside the radio set itself may be of two kinds. Steady hums or scratching, broken-up sounds that are just plain noise. These may come into the house by way of the house wiring or may originate within the house. Determination of whether they enter by the wiring is made by opening the supply switch at the house meter. If the noise disappears with the switch open the noise originates outside the house. If it still continues the cause should be looked for within the house.

A steady hum would be caused by current flowing in wires running parallel and close to the radio leads. Other noises are caused by poor connections, sparking of motors, or by sparking of any other device taking current from the lighting system or batteries. Telephone wires might possibly bring in noises, but the chances are less than with power wires. Noises in the house should be quite easy to locate, but may be harder to eliminate.

Summer Is Best Time to Improve Radio Antenna

This is the best period of the year in which to make improvements in the antenna system for the purpose of getting good results throughout the summer and bettering your usual records in the fall and winter when the signals from distant points are stronger.

Why not try shifting the direction of the aerial just to compare results? Sometimes this change makes quite a difference—and the comparison of results will be very interesting, states the service department of the Freed-Eisenmann Radio corporation. When you are overhauling your antenna system, be sure to clean off the insulator. This past winter, with its clouds of soft coal smoke, was a most severe one. The grime with which your insulators are fairly sure to be covered is a high-resistance conductor of electrical currents, consisting essentially of carbon. This means that some current at least is leaking across the insulators if they are dirty. If this is the case, and it probably is, your antenna system cannot approach its normal efficiency, because some of the energy which it absorbs is being carried away from it to the antenna support and so leaking into the ground instead of traveling down the lead-in wire to your set.

If you are using insulators of fiber with an unpolished surface, the soot and grime may have become so imbedded in the surface that it would be almost impossible to properly clean off. In this case you will avoid further loss of efficiency by replacing the present insulators with glass ones or with porcelain ones, which have a highly glazed surface. Insulators of this kind not only refuse to absorb dirt and moisture, but they are also much easier to clean. Soap and water with a stiff brush will do the trick. If the antenna wire is badly corroded, it should be replaced.

Causes Noise

One cause of noisy reception is the placing of the loud speaker so that the sound waves strike the tubes, throwing them into vibration.

Outside sources of trouble may be leaks from lines to trees, leaks in power transformers, ringing machines on telephones, rectifiers that produce sparks, electrical precipitators in manufacturing plants, etc. Sometimes these noises are accompanied by visible sparking. The telephone companies always are willing to aid in eliminating disturbances caused by ringing machines.

Care of Cones

Though all loud speakers are fragile, the cone type is most easily put out of commission. Avoid puncturing the paper, jolting the diaphragm, getting it wet or setting it on a radiator. Keep the set screw which holds the plunger on the cone tight at all times, except when the speaker is being transported.

The Shorter, the Better

Both the ground and lead-in wires from the antenna should be as short as possible. They cannot be run all over the house and near other wires and metal objects without affecting the operation of the receiver.

REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Phone Care Is Called On to France—Doings of B. PERRE

EDWARD W. PICKARD

VEN on the rocks by political and financial schemers, France is in a parlous condition, and people are growing so exasperated that a revolution is not beyond the realm of possibility. Herriot, the Socialist leader, having upset the Briand-Caillaux ministry by a vote of no confidence, has aroused deep resentment, and has called on to form a new cabinet. He did, with small hope of finding sufficient support in the angry chamber of deputies. De Monzie took office, but before the cabinet was sworn in, he was ousted by a vote of 290 to 170. The chamber then elected a new cabinet, and De Monzie was again ousted. The chamber then elected a new cabinet, and De Monzie was again ousted. national basis. The American people have a sentimental interest in the movement for disarmament. If the British government takes a strong line of military disarmament in Europe and makes it successful, the American people will soon know that what they have remitted on the debt will not be spent on armaments. I will be one of the last persons to go down on my knees to the United States and ask for revision. But payment to America might not be to her advantage, and in time the desire for revision might not all be on this side of the Atlantic.

AS BETWEEN the Coolidge forces and the disgruntled farmers, the battle in the Iowa Republican state convention was virtually a draw. The regulars succeeded in having adopted a platform that indorses the national administration, but before the vote was taken the delegates allied with the farm organizations walked out, leaving at what they called steam roller methods.

On the other hand the farmers seemed to have gained possession of the state party machine for the central committee selected in district caucuses. It is favorable to Smith, W. Brookhart, who was read out of the party two years ago and is seeking to regain the seat from which he was ousted. Senator Reed sat on the platform beside A. B. Cummings, whom he had defeated for the nomination in the primaries, and there was a semblance of a reunion of factions, but in his address Brookhart announced that when he returned to Washington he would again tell "the truth concerning conditions in Iowa."

The platform declared faith in the national Republican party, praised its economy and tax reduction and war debt programs, but the farm relief advocates forced the insertion of this demand: "That the Republican policy of economic equity of agriculture with other industries shall be carried into effect by the enactment of legislation which will permit the establishment of an American price level for agricultural products above the world price level just as the protective tariff accomplishes that result for manufactured products."

A resolution to the same effect had just been adopted by the corn belt committee and the committee of twenty-two, representing eleven corn belt states, which met in Des Moines. Plans were laid for renewing the fight for passage of a bill by congress that will make possible the handling of farm products under a protective system where the tariff can be made effective on farm products. A combination of Southern, Western and Middle West states is contemplated.

things to say about those who seek modification of the Volstead act and about referendums on the prohibition question such as that to be held in New York state. He asserted an attempt was being made to undermine and destroy the constitution through nullification, and he likened the wets to the Bolsheviks of Russia. Senator Edwards of New Jersey came back with a red hot statement in which he said: "To proclaim his unsound principles of constitutional government and to shoot his arrows of big game poison, Mr. Borah chose territory which harbors a people who have openly and flagrantly nullified two amendments to the Constitution for the past fifty years."

THE senate slush fund committee has begun its inquiry into the expenditures of the Illinois senatorial primary campaign. Senator Reed of Missouri, the chairman, announced the investigation would be as thorough as that into the expenses of the candidates in the Pennsylvania primaries. It was understood Col. Frank L. Smith, who defeated Senator McKinley for the nomination, was to be one of the first witnesses. Mr. McKinley is ill in Washington and probably will be unable to go to Chicago for the inquiry.

Senator Reed isn't through with the Anti Slush fund inquiry by any means. He has vowed it is to be a complete statement of official expenditures in the present campaign, and demands that the names of the contributors to the league's funds be made public.

POLAND desires friendly relations with all other nations, and as evidence of her peaceable disposition Dictator Pilsudski, who is war minister, intends to dispense with military attaches at most of the Polish legations. Such is the announcement of Foreign Minister Zelewski to parliament. "Poland does not want a single foot of foreign soil, but on the other hand she will not give up a foot of her soil," he said, amid cheers.

AS ITS first move in the enforcement of the laws concerning the churches, the Mexican government cited thirty-six Roman Catholic priests to answer charges of contempt of the law and refusal to register. As the church authorities at a recent general meeting decided to refrain from registering, the government is strong enough to inspect the churches and religious societies.

Every Catholic society in every city, town and village, it is said, has pledged its members to obey the orders of the central committee and the Catholic authorities. At Catholic headquarters in Mexico City it was asserted that notwithstanding the restrictions of the law, the church would not suppress religious orders. The Catholics have started a boycott against the government, refraining from buying articles of their greatest revenue, this including lottery tickets. Also, Catholic women are giving up all social functions.

DEATHS of the week include those of Felix Djerjinsky, the merciless and ruthless head of the soviet Russian chieftain or secret police; Martin L. Lucke, Democratic nominee for governor of Wisconsin; and Henry T. Douglas, last surviving general of the Confederacy.

PARIS HATS SHOW MUCH CHIC; COAT STYLES FOR CHILDREN

IT IS doubtful if the genius of the French for designing clothes shines more brightly in one particular than in others, but it often seems that the things they make for matrons load all their other achievements in chic. This field of endeavor gives them the widest latitude in choice of materials and in intricate work. In millinery these things, with spirited shapes, play into the hands of the designers and they evolve dignified and beautiful headwear for women of importance. Even in the simpler types of hats they compel shapes and materials to express the pulse of middle life.

FOUR PARIS HATS

In designing superb millinery and this is easily proved by leaving those interested to guess which hats are French and which American in any mixed collection. It will not take a minute to place the hat at the top of the group as an import. It is a turban made of ribbon ingeniously draped to form irregular undulating folds at the front, where they are supported by a handsome metallic ornament. This chic tailored affair might be worn almost anywhere. It has no such style. At the left a fine pliable straw shape is veiled by lace gathered into a rosette at the side and finished with an enameled ornament. Another tailored hat at the right challenges comparison with the dressier sister. It is a straw shape with plaited and folded ribbon for trimming finished by jeweled ornaments. The last hat pictured shows details that make the new coats interesting, used as fastenings for the fabric belts and as decorations on strap trimmings. Coats for little kindergarteners are another story as simple and brief as a Mother Goose rhyme and like it, bearing much repetition. A good example is shown here made of navy twill with an applique leaf trimming on the revers and sleeves. There is really very little difference in the cut of coats for little tots and those for larger children, but the older girls have a greater variety in choice of styles in pockets and neck treatments. For them the scarf collar and a variety of pockets are available. Turnover collars are popular on all children's coats. Very simple coats for the littlest girls are made double breasted and fastened with two large buttons, most of them have raglan sleeves. For girls in their early teens solid color and plaid coatings are about equally popular.

Narrow at Shoulders Capes of all lengths are nearly always circular in cut and no matter how voluminous they become about the feet, they keep a narrow, neat shoulder line.

Another Match The newest match in present-day costume necessities is between the parasol and the bag. These now are supposed to harmonize not only in color but in material and style.

So Very Flattering The Pierrot collar is returning, usually in organdie or chiffon, though it has actually been seen in starched linen.

SALADS

The salads which follow may be properly termed national as they are the favorite salads of the people in several countries or localities, the name of which is given to the salad: French Potato Salad.—Cut cold boiled potatoes in dice, add a few small onions finely-chopped, one tablespoonful of finely-chopped chives and a tablespoonful of minced parsley. Let stand for an hour or two to season with a French dressing, adding a generous amount of cayenne. Serve on lettuce and top each serving with a spoonful of rich mayonnaise; sprinkle with minced chives.

German Salad With Sausages.—Boil four breakfast sausages twenty minutes, cut into half-inch pieces. Boil one-half pound of sauerkraut ten minutes, drain and cool and mix with the sausage. Cut thin slices of winter radish into very thin slices and arrange around the dish, sprinkle with finely-minced shallot, pickles and capers. Serve with French dressing.

Cuban Salad.—Break four or five dry soda crackers, shred two green peppers, slice one Spanish onion very thin, skin, bone and chop six anchovies. Serve on lettuce with French dressing.

Montese Salad.—Take four mild-flavored onions until tender, remove the peeling and put a lump of butter on each with salt and pepper. When cold cut into quarters and mix with four hard cooked eggs cut into quarters and six sardines boned and chopped. Add parsley and a teaspoonful of curry to a boiled dressing and serve.

Russian Tomato and Sardine Salad.—Arrange a bed of lettuce in a salad bowl. Peel four tomatoes of medium size, cut fine and mix with a few sardines boned and chopped. Place on lettuce and serve with mayonnaise.

Chicken Salad a la American.—To one cupful of finely-minced cooked chicken add one cupful of tender celery finely cut, one apple minced fine, one-half of a green pepper also minced. Mix with a highly seasoned boiled dressing and serve on lettuce.

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS Salads are always acceptable. The following is nourishing enough to take the place of a main dish at a meal: East India Salad. Cream until smooth two cream cheeses with one-half cupful of equal parts of cream and milk, add one-half cupful of grated cheese, three-fourths of a tablespoonful of gelatin softened in a tablespoonful of cold water, then add one tablespoonful of boiling water. Season with paprika and cayenne and turn into a border mold. Chill thoroughly, remove from the mold, arrange on a bed of lettuce and serve with the following sauce:

Curry Sauce.—Mix one-fourth of a teaspoonful of pepper with three-fourths of a teaspoonful of salt, a few dashes of cayenne, five tablespoonfuls of olive oil, three tablespoonfuls of mild vinegar and one teaspoonful of curry. Beat with a drier egg beater until well blended.

Lettuce With Sherry's Dressing.—Mix three-fourths of a cupful of olive oil with five tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one teaspoonful of powdered sugar, one small southern onion chopped fine, one tablespoonful each of red and green pepper, one teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of cayenne. Put into a mason jar and shake for five minutes. Set on ice and let stand an hour; shake well before using. Serve on lettuce.

Creole Loaf.—Take one and one-half pounds of meat—pork and beef mixed; one good-sized onion chopped, salt, pepper and one cupful of cooked onion; make into a loaf, adding a cupful of tomato. Place in a baking pan and pour over the loaf another cupful of tomato and one-half of a chopped onion. Roast, basting often. Thicken the gravy, serve with the meat. Bake one-half hour in a moderate oven.

Lamb Patties.—Put through the meat grinder any uncooked meat from the shoulder or neck, form into balls, wrap each in strips of bacon, skewer with a toothpick and fry until the bacon is crisp and brown. Serve the patties with a pan gravy.

Now that the field mushroom is in season there are so many delightful dishes which may be prepared with them. Creamed and served in patty shells of timbal cases, served with a little butter and adding them to the beefsteak gravy. Creamed with sweetbreads, or in combination with sweetbreads, and served on toast and any number of other ways will be suggested as they are used. It is a pity that this delicious vegetable should go to waste from lack of appreciation, as often there will be found bushels of them in the fields.

Wholes Not Real Fish Whales have to come to the surface of the ocean to breathe. They are not really fish, and cannot breathe as the ordinary fish does. Their ability to stay long under water is due to their vast lung capacity.

WEIGHED ONLY 98 POUNDS

Helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Cleveland, Ohio.—"I have really had all kinds of trouble. After having my first baby, I lost weight, no matter what I did. Then a doctor told me I would be better if I had another baby, which I did. But I got worse, was always sickly and went down to 98 pounds. My neighbor told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I tried it. After taking four bottles, I weigh 115 pounds. It has just done wonders for me and I can do my housework now without one bit of trouble."

Whale Meat Sent to Feed African Natives

In his annual report the chief sanitary inspector of Inverness, Scotland, after an investigation at the request of a large number of taxpayers who had complained of disagreeable odors, says the curing of whale flesh for human consumption has been carried on by residents of the Island of Harris for some time.

It appears, says the inspector, that the industry was inaugurated by the late Lord Leverhulme, of Lever Bros., which firm has fishing and other interests in many parts of the world. The inspector's report explains that the work is done at the herring curing station at Leverburgh, where the meat is cut into small pieces, washed and pickled, afterward being hung on frames and dried by mechanical power.

When thoroughly dry the whale meat is packed under pressure in kegs and exported to the Congo for feeding natives working for the Lever company.

Restoring Old Writing

When writing on old manuscripts has become faded and illegible it can frequently be restored by the following method: The effect on parchment is usually of a lasting nature but fresh applications are necessary on ordinary writing paper. Lay the paper as flat as possible and dampen it evenly with clean, cold water. Brush over the writing with a flat camel-hair brush dipped in a solution of sulphide of ammonia, when the writing will immediately appear plain and readable.

Restoring Old Fort

Restoration of old Fort McHenry at Baltimore, where Francis Scott Key wrote "The Star Spangled Banner," has been started and work is progressing. The old fort will be restored to its condition and appearance during the War of 1812, when its bombardment by the British ships inspired the national anthem.

Why Richardson?

State treasury bankrupt in 1922; over $11,000,000 surplus in general fund in 1926. There is the evidence of Richardson efficiency and economy.

The specter of an ad valorem tax does not alarm while Friend W. Richardson is governor. He will never permit expenditures that exceed the income of the state from the tax on gross incomes of the corporations.

The issue in California: Shall it be economy and efficiency under Richardson, or extravagance and waste, politics and plunder, under the political gangsters.

Governor Richardson threw the professional politician and the gangster bosses out of the back door of the state capitol over three years ago. Don't let them come back via the front door.

Taxes and Tarriff

Taxes and tariffs!

Here is the combination that cannot be overlooked in the business of government.

Taxes for the conduct of public affairs; tariffs for the protection of home products.

High taxes hit a vital spot—the pocket book. Low tariffs, or no tariffs open the doors to ruinous competition.

And between the two, the citizens—taxpayer and producer—is crushed unless his person and interests are protected by just legislation.

California may count itself fortunate in being one of ten states with a Republican Senator on the Finance Committee.

Senator Samuel M. Shortridge is a member of this most important body in Washington which passes on protective tariff rates, taxation, government revenue, affairs of the treasury department, veterans' bureau legislation, public health service, customs service, irrigation and reclamation water rights settlements, irrigation project financing, funds for maintenance of irrigation projects, storage and diversion of waters of rivers and lakes and amending and withdrawal of public entry lands.

California has not a single congressman on the Ways and Means Committee, before which these matters come in the House of Representatives, and will be without committee representation on the subjects of legislation unless Senator Shortridge is returned to the Senate!

Why The Cry?

What is all this hue and cry about the World Court?

Is there any real reason for it except that it may delude a few voters?

We think not.

Here is the situation of the United States and the World Court in a nutshell—

Are we in? Not until the forty-eight other nations have said so.

Are we out? Yes, if any nation, big or little, says it will not accept us on our own terms as set forth in the reservations voted by the United States Senate, we are out.

Reservations? Yes; no case concerning the United States can be even considered by the World Court without the comment of the United States, nor can any dispute involving the United States be submitted to the court without the conclusion of a treaty between this country and the other state or states affected agreeing to so submit the dispute.

Treaty? Why that takes the action of the President and two-thirds of the Senate.

Further, the World Court resolution adopted by the Senate at the request of President Coolidge provides that "such adherence shall not be taken to involve any legal relation on the part of the United States to the League of Nations, or the assumption of any obligations by the United States under the treaty of Versailles."

Really now, what is all the row about?

Confidence and Faith

The two terms are closely allied. They are the foundation of civilization, the two stones upon which humanity builds. Without them man could hardly exist. Where they are found lacking, progress is not in evidence. In the individual, in the community, in the nation, they are the important factors.

by the

F. Thomas Process

Our many years of experience has taught us that it is impossible to do perfect cleaning with cheap, inferior methods. That is why we found it necessary to invest nearly $500,000 in the equipment of a plant and the establishment of an expert organization to do the quality of work demanded by our customer.

With the "F. THOMAS PROCESS" we do not only remove every particle of dust but we return your garments without that usual disagreeable smell of gasoline. Every drop of gasoline we use in cleaning is redistilled and very highly refined.

Raw gasoline—the kind that you buy for your automobile—is full of heavy oils and unfit for cleaning fabrics. It is little better than ordinary distillate and leaves a sickening gasoline smell on your clothes.

Hints To Those Who Would Write

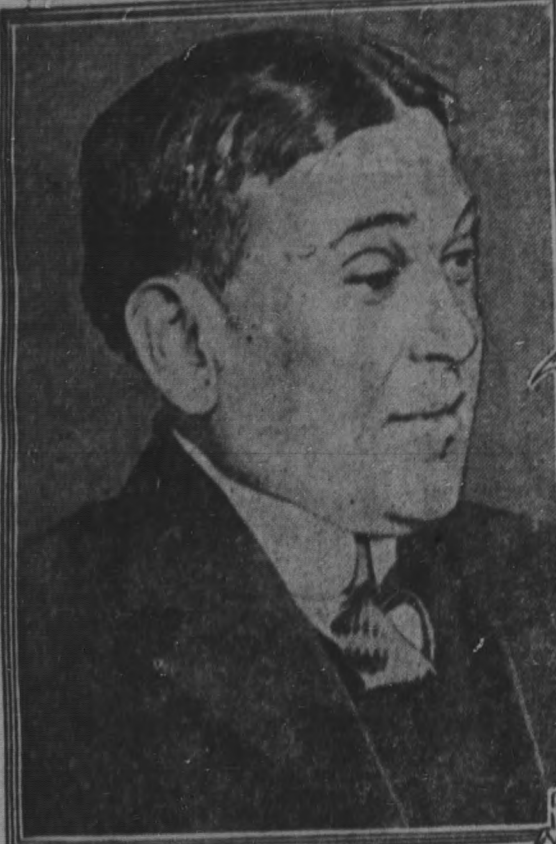

Illustration by J. L. Menckel

WOULD-BE writers have a better chance today of getting their stuff into print than at any time in history. One look at a well-stocked news or magazine stand will tell you why. Where one magazine held forth twenty-five years ago, two or three are in the rack today. And, despite the wall of publishers, more books are launched and sold today than ever before.

Consequently, with all this space to be filled, there is a continued and increasing demand for filler. Realizing this demand, nearly everyone who can compose a grammatical sentence—and many who cannot—feel deep within themselves a strong desire to contribute to the supply. In most persons this desire rarely gets beyond the "want to" stage. To sympathetic ears they will confess their desire, adding perhaps that they "know they could write if they but took the time."

If they do take the time and compose something which at least has a beginning and an end, their troubles start. The manuscript generally comes back with the rejection slip. This great demand begins to seem not so pressing after all.

According to George Horace Lorimer, editor of the Saturday Evening Post, the young writer is the victim of no conspiracy, nor are there any secrets, which, once learned, will land him on the royal road to fame. Mr. Lorimer is the hope of thousands of strugglers after fame, who "feel that they could do much better than anyone who is writing at present if they could only attract his attention."

"Learning to write is more difficult, perhaps, than learning other professions," said Mr. Lorimer in an interview published in the International Book Review, "because it is a lonely process. The thing most young writers fail to realize is that they must serve an apprenticeship. To be a doctor or a lawyer one must also serve an apprenticeship, but it is less painful, because it is laid out along prescribed lines. The young student of medicine must have years of training at school. Then he becomes an interne and finally starts out to build up a practice for himself—which is a long, arduous proceeding."

"The best thing for the would-be author to do is to take a position on a newspaper. The training he receives there is invaluable. He is probably pretty young when he goes there, and the first thing it does for him is to give him experience and a perspective on life. He learns to write every day about what he sees. He begins to write for magazines, and he sends out things which promptly come back to him. Now, the difference between learning to write and learning other professions comes here. When a young doctor begins to practice, he does not consider it a personal affair. He is not coming to him at once. He tells himself that he is not well known as yet. He has not made enough acquaintances. But the young writer who creates something—a story, a poem, an article—has put something of himself into it. He draws upon his very soul for his material. And when it comes back to him with a printed slip of rejection, he cannot help feeling that it is a reflection upon himself. This is natural. There is a feeling of hurt, however sensible he may be, which affects him deeply. Writing is, after all, the expression of one's ego, and the ego is a sensitive affair which is easily wounded.

"When we get a manuscript which we think shows promise, we try to get in touch with the writer. If possible, we send a man to see him. We talk the thing over with him and make suggestions. We try to help him to develop his own talent. For, despite impressions to the contrary, we welcome new writers. We want the fresh point of view of the young person. It is like injecting new blood into an old body."

"The public is not made up of fools. It is an enthusiastic over the good work of an unknown author as it is over that of the man with a big name. Big names sell stories, of course. That is because the public has liked some previous work of the well-known man and looks for something as good again. But if his work falls below the standard he has set for himself, if it does not measure up to what the public has learned to expect of him, it is worse for him—and for us—than if he had been an unknown, because there is the element of disappointment."

"My advice to the young writer is this: Serve your apprenticeship, knowing it for what it is. Learn all you can about life, about men and women, about history and the affairs of the world, about literature and the conflict of ideas. Learn to think. Make yourself a master of words. Develop your individual style. Then, when you are ready, go out and do something to say, you will find your market."

Another authority on the writer's art who was caught in the far South-west and interviewed for the same magazine is John Galsworthy. Asked to tell how he got the ideas for his stories, he said:

"Really, no idea, as such, comes to me at once for a story," he began. "Usually some little, ironical incident, some occurrence, some character, appeals to me and takes form so that I see it in the shape of some kind of a story. I do not deliberately shape it to carry out an idea; it seems naturally to shape itself. It is impossible to give you a rule for this."

"One can indicate it by taking some ideas, for example, in 'Broken Boat,' in 'Caravan,' you will find a short story that grew out of an ironical incident. Ironical situations, somehow, always appeal to me most."

"It happened that I met an actor in a country town where I was stopping. He told me the opinion that it was erected during the period of the Antonines (180-180 A. D.). It is said to have suggested to Thomas Jefferson the plan of the state capitol at Richmond, Va."

Famous Roman Temple

The Maison Carree is a Corinthian temple at Nîmes, in southern France, erected during the time of the Roman occupation of the country. It has been carefully restored, and is used at present as a museum. The structure is rectangular in shape, measuring 85 by 45 feet. The Maison Carree was at one time attributed to Augustus (27 B. C.-14 A. D.), but a closer study of its architecture has

Fish That Cries

In Hongkong harbor, a strange fish, of the size and appearance of a baby's head, has been caught. It is like a big orange, with eyes, mouth, nose, ears, and two small uncommon-looking fins. This curious creature, resembling what the Chinese describe as a "kwa" fish, is popularly known as a mermaid's child, and utters a sound like the cry of a baby. The possession of this fish is said to bring good luck.

Three American Flags

In the office of the secretary of war at Washington are three American flags that are of great historical interest. They are the garrison flag, which floated over Fort Sumter, South Carolina, during the bombardment of April 12-13, 1861; the flag which enveloped the body of President Lincoln on the journey from Washington to Springfield, in April, 1865, and the garrison flag flown over Fort

"You mean Mr. Baxter? Yes, I saw him. He has gone down to Coyote." The repression of his tone drew Maria's attention. She turned and looked at him, the lamp, unshaded, in her hand, its light full on Caleb's face. She gasped and then a sort of baleful joy flitted over her swarthy face.

"Madre de Dios! You met him. Seguro! An' you fought weath' him. Bueno! I hope you spoiled for beer that han'some face. May he never return—that Baxter! Eef he does, eet is better for needed. For Padilla weel not use his fists. An' now you mus' wash that blood from your face, senor. I weel breeng warm water to the room where you sleep before. After you eat, you weel find all ready."

Her speech, fierce at the start, had softened. She bestowed a nod of approval on Caleb, her eyes kindly, and swept out. It was plain that she had lost favor at El Nido. It was equally plain that Maria had meant to convey that much to Caleb, together with her emphatic indorsement of the fight that he had not contradicted.

The coffee and sandwiches finished, Caleb went through the patio to the room, finding a lamp, warm water and towels. He made himself more presentable, though the bruises and abrasions where the steel wire had marked his flesh still persisted. Cleansed and refreshed, he lit his pipe and strolled through the patio to where the three cars were parked. Kennedy's, Baxter's roadster and Conklin's machine. Conklin had a chauffeur, his practice was evidently larger and more profitable than that of the physician from Coyote. The man spoke to him civilly. He was examining Baxter's car.

"Anything wrong with it?" asked Caleb.

"Nothing wrong with the car. Only with the bean of the guy that owns it. Let his battery run down. No juice. The Spanish dame says he cussed it up and down when he tried to start it. Nothin' doin' an' he has to hoof it way down the canyon."

It seemed to place up now—the idea that Baxter had offended Betty Clinton and had been summarily dismissed. So summarily, that finding his car batteries useless, he had decided to leave the car to be sent for and stalked off down canyon in a mood that Caleb had been ready to match.

"Mr. Warner?" Doctor Conklin had come out of the house. Caleb joined him.

"There's nothing more that I can do. I must get back to Paloma. I've suggested that you go with me. There's a nurse needed. It would be a good idea to get Burton, though Kennedy will stay, and is doing all that can be done. The trouble culminates rapidly, but Miss Clinton naturally wants Burton."

"He may not be able to get here in time. It's touch and go. Clinton is not a strong man. He got caught in the hills in the storm. Drenched! Then his horse wrenched a fetlock in fording the swollen stream and Clinton led home. D—d foolhouse!"

He had suggested that you get in with Burton as soon as you can reach a phone. I can get you to Paloma in time for the ten o'clock train—last one tonight. And you may be able to arrange about a nurse. She'll have to come back with Burton in his car."

"Of course," Caleb replied. "I'll see that a nurse arrives. If you'll give me some addresses and names to round up if I can't get one through Burton."

"Good. I knew you'd tackle it, Warner. Told her so. Hop in. We haven't too much time."

They started without a chance for Caleb to see the girl again. But he was in her service and she would know that.

At Paloma station with a few minutes to spare, the doctor wrote down the address of a nurses' home and the names of the women he preferred on such a case.

"If you can't get any of these, try the second address," he said. "Mention Burton's name with the case. Carries more weight than mine. And get that nurse over here tonight. If you can't raise Burton here's a note that will get you oxygen—two tanks—that must come with the nurse. It may make all the difference. Here comes your train. Good luck to you."

Caleb got a working wire to Golden at the Oakville Ferry and he let the boat go, putting in the twenty minutes before the next one to making arrangements. He got a nurse and told her to hold herself in readiness. He also got the oxygen. Burton was on a case and could not leave.

Arrived across the bay he found car and nurse awaiting him. Fifteen minutes saw the oxygen loaded in the car and they caught the midnight ferry for the return. They slid off the boat to the apron at Oakville Estuary at the first moment and went rocketing through the night to Paloma and onto the sidewalk, plowing up that with the full energy of the high-powered car, rushing across the valley and sounding the strident klaxon to let the ranch know that they were coming.

"A cup of coffee and I'm off," he said. "It's over one way or another by this but I'll go, of course. Clinton and his girl are old friends as well as patients. As for you, young man," he added suddenly bending his gaze on Caleb, "you're all in. What the devil have you been up to? A hot bath and bed for you. Instantly. You look as if you had been taking part in a riot."

Caleb felt like it. Despite his anxiety, he succumbed to sleep in the cab. He dropped into unconsciousness the moment he stretched out between the sheets. The sun was flooding the room when he awakened. It was a glorious morning, vital, hopeful. Caleb went immediately to his telephone.

"Are there any messages for me?" he asked the operator. The girl gave him the office number of Doctor Burton, that had been left with her and, on his request, got him the connection. The doctor's office nurse spoke briefly. Caleb hung up the hook softly. Betty Clinton's father was dead.

CHAPTER XIII

Baxter Strikes

Caleb did not feel that his present relations admitted of his writing a letter of condolence to Betty Clinton and he would have been at loss how to word it. To send flowers, much as he desired to do something to express the sympathy that he felt for her supreme sorrow, was the function of relatives and friends more intimate than he. But Mrs. Carquinez helped him out of his quandary. He met her on the street, on her way to the Vendors. Betty, she told him, was almost prostrated, but was now bearing up bravely.

"She takes things standing up," said the artist's wife. "I told me of all you did for them the night her father was taken ill. She is very grateful. I shall tell her that I have seen you."

She ended, as she shook hands. "Is there any message you would like me to give her?"

"My sympathy, my wish that I could do something. That is all."

Linckley had a suite of offices in the building of the Crystal Springs Water company. He turned over to Caleb one of these rooms with its complete equipment, and there Caleb worked hard over his plans while Hinckley, with the engineering staff, was making fuller investigation across the bay with a view to confirmation of the project. Options were already being carefully negotiated. A few days should see the deal assured and actual work commenced in the field.

Caleb caught only a glimpse or two of Mary Morgan. Cox's offices where she worked in her capacity of assistant to the president's secretary were on another floor from Caleb's room. He knew, through his bank, that she had received the money, he imagined that she had given notice to the company and was waiting for its explanation before going away.

Some Facts About Washington Shaft

Now that the Washington monument is temporarily closed to the public, for the installation of a new elevator, it is but natural, perhaps, that some of the facts that are associated with it and which have been taken for granted should interestingly be recalled. For instance, not everyone knows that the number going up the monument in a single day has often exceeded 10,000, or that there is not an officially inscribed line anywhere on the monument indicative even of the fact that the structure is in honor of George Washington. The shaft, by the way, was started in 1848, but after 150 feet or so of the total 555 were completed, there was a long period of suspension, due largely to the fact that the move-

Accepting Apology

A lively discussion between two men led to a row when one told the other he lied. The offended one rushed forward and they clinched. The other man exclaimed: "I reiterate that you're a liar!"

To the astonishment of those around, the aggrieved man let go his hold. "Oh, well," he said, "I accept the apology. If a man says he reiterates that's all a gentleman can ask."

Baxter had seemingly dropped out of sight. Caleb had changed his living quarters at the beginning of the month, which was a week after the meeting in the canyon, and he had not met him, though he had occasionally heard him leaving or entering his room, or moving about on the deck that Baxter was about it. He knew that Baxter was "posted" on the Jeannette board at the Altruists for dues and dining-room chits. It was plain that the sale of Hiermanos valley had fallen through.

Cox came one morning into Caleb's office and discussed general progress for a few moments before he took a seat across from the high stool on which Caleb worked at his drawings.

"You've had a falling out with Baxter?" he said abruptly. "He's after your scalp and seems to be tolerably cocksure he's going to get it," he went on, not waiting for comment. "He came to this morning with a proposition that involved, with our acceptance of it, your dismissal, or at least the relegation of you to a subordinate position, so far as your identification with the project is concerned. I was busy and I made an appointment for three o'clock. I should like you to be present."

"Thanks," said Caleb. "I'll be very glad of the opportunity."

He did not offer and Cox did not seem to expect any explanations. He could not tell exactly what Baxter had for weapons but he rather fancied he knew the principal one that would be employed—and he was ready with a parry that would prove a bit disconcerting. This weapon was a boomerang he had long known the existence of and looked forward to seeing it launched only to return, and strike the thrower. It was only since his talk with Mary Morgan at Haight's that he had considered Baxter as likely to use it.

Baxter was the type of man who would never blame himself under any conditions. To the score against Caleb he would undoubtedly set the denial of the loan, the loss of the Hiermanos valley sale, his dismissal by Betty Clinton on the night of her father's sickness and death, and the fight on the bridge in which he had been first worsted and then rescued by Caleb. The rescue would be an ignominy. It was doubtful whether Baxter had been normal since his mother's marriage. His brain had been under stimulation or depression of alcohol—practically continually. He had brooded over his reverses and now Caleb was placed as sole author of all his troubles, the target of his vindictiveness against conditions.

Prepared as he was in a measure for the interview, it struck him that here was a test to see how far he could depend upon Cox where the company's best interests were at stake. Cox knew about the boomerang. It was the decent thing for Cox to do to ask him to be present. Mightily decent.

Caleb's face was grim when he entered Cox's office at three o'clock, his eyes were narrowed and his lean jaw jutted, bossed with tense muscles. Cox pushed over cigars with a greeting genially modulated as usual. There was a difference, though; Cox's eyes were cold as shadow ice. As Caleb lit his cigar in his chair the buzzer sounded and Cox took up his desk phone with a little nod at Caleb. The note was confidential—warning, despite the frosty eyes.

"All right, show him in," he said. Baxter entered, jaunty, well-dressed. He held his head confidently. But he looked the worse for wear, for all his mien. He smelled of the barber shop, but message had not changed the flabbiness of his putty-colored flesh nor taken the rings from beneath slightly bloodshot eyes. He stared hard at Caleb and then sneered.

Again Caleb recollected Field's prediction. It looked as if it was swiftly coming to pass. Baxter's eyes had lost humanity; there was no more soul in them than there would have been in artificial orbs of transparent glass back of which crimson light was burning. The sneer was more of a snarl, that of a beast. His whole face was animal.

"I understood this was to be a confidential interview," he said. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Champion Sire and His Owner

The photograph shows Samuel D. Riddle, a prominent breeder and owner, looking over his famous horse Man o' War, considered the best horse of all time. This champion has been in the stud at Mr. Riddle's Faraway farm, near Lexington, Ky., and has bred several fine horses, notably Crusader.

Sport Notes

At the first tee of any municipal course, golf is a waiting game.

Jack Dempsey has been knocked out only once—by Jim Flynn, in one round in 1917.

Eighteen swimmers, eleven of whom are women, are in training to swim the English channel this summer.

Ivan Poddubny, the giant Russian wrestler, is the oldest man now engaged in strenuous competitive sport. He's fifty-seven.

Agitation has been started in Great Britain to establish permanent golf courses where championship tournaments may be played.

The polo center of the United States is on Long Island, N. Y., and here, within a radius of fifteen miles, can be found nineteen polo fields.

The American golf player uses an average of about 200 balls every season, or a total of approximately 1,000,000,000 balls for all players.

Eight teammates of Fred Fellz, Santa Rosa (Calif.) athlete, underwent blood transfusions that he might recover from injuries resulting in a football game.

Three California woman tennis players have won the national singles title three times in succession. They are Hazel Hotchkiss, Mary K. Browne and Helen Wills.

In spite of her various discourtesies—in fact, because of them—Miss Suzanne Lenglen is recognized as the world's greatest exponent of temperamental tennis.

Wilmer Crowell of Swarthmore will referee, and Walter Eckersall of Chicago will umpire the annual Army vs. Navy football classic at Chicago, November 28.

For the second consecutive year the University of Montana won all its dual track and field meets this season and tied with the University of Washington in the Seattle relays.

Seven championship teams is the record established by the Princeton freshmen this year. The yearlings won in basketball, tennis, lacrosse, football, soccer, hockey and wrestling.

An Australian woman, visiting this country, says it is astounding how young Americans look. Only in America could Willie Hoppe, the billiardist, remain a boy wonder for twenty years.

Tommy Ryan, former world's welterweight and middleweight champion, has decided to grow a mustache. Ryan, who is fifty-six, says it will help bring back memories of the days when fighters were fighters.

Plagues Chicago Fans

Al Thomas, the big blonde pitcher bought by the Chicago White Sox from Baltimore, has made a debut in the box. He has contributed to the high standing of Collins.

Sisler's Best Year

George Sisler, manager and first baseman of the St. Louis Browns, ends his best year in 1922. That campaign he hit for the remarkable average of .420, equalling the American record hung up by Ty Cobb in 1911. That same season he also led the circuit in base hits, with 51 cushions. He scored 44 runs in 142 games, almost one to the strike of Gray, and poked out 245 hits. In 42 doubles, 18 triples and 8 home runs.

Funniest Situation in Career of Umpire Byron

Bill Byron, one-time National league umpire, who, since leaving the Pacific Coast league, has gone into retirement, had his fill of funny experiences on the ball field. Asked not so long ago for the funniest situation of his career, Bill told of this one, which had occurred in a minor league game:

"I had chased about half the home club from the field and the manager was much disgusted. Late in the game a big butterfly insisted on flying about the diamond, mostly between the batter and the pitcher.

"At a rather critical spot in the game the manager, coaching at third, called for time. I stopped the game and asked him what was the trouble.

"Nothing, except that since you are so good at chasing players off the field, why don't you chase that butterfly?"

"I wanted to laugh, but I decided to try to make good, and did. I sneaked out, and on the first try put my cap over the butterfly. I then summoned the bat boy and ordered him to take it to the clubhouse."

Maureen Is Champion

Exhibiting a brilliant brand of golf, Maureen Orcutt, eighteen-year-old star, triumphed over Mrs. Wright Goss at the Westchester-Biltmore Country club for the Metropolitan championship by the score of 5 up and 4 to play. Miss Orcutt is now regarded as one of the leading contenders for the laurels of Glenna Collett.

Badgers Get Field for Baseball and Football

The addition of a plot of land ten acres in size, bordering on the land of the new university dormitories, will give to the university one of the best intramural athletic fields in the country. The land will be fixed over into baseball diamonds for the spring part of the program and will serve a greater purpose for football in the fall. The extension of such a program in the neighborhood of Camp Randall will tend to center the entire Badger athletic program away from the lower campus. With the dormitories on the verge of completion, it means the growth of a new center for Cardinal athletics and an extension that should carry them out of the business district of the city. Another factor that will make this the real center of Wisconsin warriors is the fast-growing impetus for the field house and the sanction of the regents to a location just across the street from the new intramural field.

Kelly's Lengthy Reach Also Helps the Umpire

"It is difficult for an umpire to miss a close decision at first base when George Kelly is the first baseman," says Barry McCormick, "provided he is familiar with the manner in which Kelly operates. Kelly has such long arms and uses them so skillfully that a runner who might be safe by half a step with any other first baseman on the bag is out by a step because Kelly reaches out and snags the ball. The other Giant infielders don't have to get the ball to the bag ahead of the runner. All they have to do is to get it within a yard or two of the bag before the runner reaches the bag itself. This makes plays that might have been hard for an umpire very easy."

Iowa Elects Captains

X. P. Boyles '28 has been elected captain of the University of Iowa track team for next year. Boyles has not been defeated in the pole vault this year and promises to go over 13 feet next season. He has competed for two seasons and is the second field man to captain the team, succeeding R. G. Dauber '26, star shotputter. G. M. Hoben '27 was named to lead the Iowa baseball nine for next season. Hoben has been brilliant at first base.

LACROSSE OLDEST AMONG PASTIMES

Ancient Indian Game Senior Sport of This Country.

Not only is lacrosse the oldest known game in North America, but it is also one of the fastest in existence.

The "crosse" or racket-like implement used in the game receives its name from the likeness of the gutted "stick" to a bishop's crozier, thus causing the early French colonists in America to call it "La Crosse."

While the Indians played it as a war maneuver game, it came into significance as a test of athletic activity among the tribes long before the white man took it up as a major sport.

Canada adopted lacrosse years ago. Professionalism has been cut out and it is a purely amateur sport. It has been played in the United States since 1881, when it was organized in the colleges in the East, and is now a great factor in Harvard, Yale, Syracuse, Johns Hopkins, Cornell, Swarthmore, Hobart, West Point Military academy, Annapolis Naval academy, and other leading seats of learning.

Feminine lacrosse started in England, and in the British isles at present there are 135 girls' teams in colleges and universities alone. In this country, besides the Ladies' Lacrosse League of America, with six teams, there are expert clubs of feminine athletes playing lacrosse at Bryn Mawr, Sargent college and other leading colleges.

Lacrosse has some similar points to both football and ice hockey. It is played on a field the same size as football, with gridiron of similar proportions, the goals being the same distance apart—100 yards. While the 11 players on a football team line up across the field facing each other, the 12 players on a lacrosse team line up and down the field, from goal to goal, facing each other. The goals are similar to hockey goals, six feet square, with nets as in hockey. The positions of goalkeeper, point and cover-point are also similar to hockey and there is a similarity to basket ball in the mode of lining up the players.

The game is played with a hard rubber ball, "faced" off from the center by the two center players. At the referee's starting whistle the "draw" is made by the two "facing off," and the game begins, the players carrying or passing the ball up or down the field. The object is to put the ball into an opponent's goal.

BASEBALL SQUITS

Baseball gloves with hookless fasteners have appeared.

Pittsburgh Baseball Umpires association includes 39 members.

Gordon Cochrane, Athletics' star catcher, was a four-letter man at Boston university.

The Giants released Warren Cote, former Holy Cross infielder, to Toledo of the American association.

Buddy Myer, since coming back to the game after a long layoff, is hitting the apple with startling regularity.

George Fisher, slugging right fielder of Minneapolis, was released on option to the Indianapolis association club.

Macon turned Pitcher Luther Barnes, left-hander, back to the Buffalo club of the International league.

Pitcher Joe Bush, recently released by the Washington American league club, signed a contract with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

George Sisler of the Browns had hit safely in sixteen straight games until Herb Pennock and Walter Beall of the Yankees stopped him.

Sammy Bohne, Cincinnati Red utility infielder, was sold outright to the Brooklyn Nationals. He was not obtained by the waiver route as reported.

Members of the New Orleans Pelicans refuse to allow officials of the club to sit on the players' bench during the games. They say their presence is a sure hoodoo.

Lee Fohl seems to have picked up a likely looking pitching prospect in Hal Wittse. The youngster has turned in several notable victories this season. He's a former college star from the South.

Jack Tavener has developed faster than any shortstop coming into the American league since Joe Sewell. He hops around like a jack rabbit and is fast as fury as the middle man on a double play.

Now seventy-one years old, John D. "Bonsetter" Reese has retired from active practice, but will continue to treat ailing athletes who seek his counsel, just as he has for the past forty years.

Walter Malls, left-handed pitcher, with the Syracuse International league club, has been purchased by San Francisco of the Pacific Coast league. Malls was the property of the St. Louis Nationals.

Helme Manush, who has been playing center field in place of Cobb for Detroit, has been doing his share of hitting. Manush takes a wicked "cut" at the ball and, when he connects, the pellet takes a nice ride.

In the sixth inning at New York on June 17, 1925, the Tigers scored 11 runs before the first out and 13 in the full round, duplicating the total record by the Athletics two days before. Seven passes were mixed in with six hits and two errors.

"If a player has confidence he will make good," said Hornsby. "If he hasn't he won't, no matter how capable he happens to be at certain periods. Confidence makes championship teams, and we have it."

FISHER BODIES

GENERAL MOTORS

LOOK AT THE NEW CARS AND SEE—BODY BY FISHER

The new car announcements of General Motors have swept Fisher into the greatest eminence in motor car history.

Everywhere you see the emblem—Body by Fisher. In all price classes, it is the inescapable badge of quality. The leaders, such as Cadillac, Buick, Chevrolet, Oakland, Oldsmobile and Pontiac, all display as one of their proudest assets the symbol—Body by Fisher.

It is their assurance of public satisfaction—in safety, in charm of line, in beauty of color and appointment, in comfort and convenience.

Fisher—the greatest body builder in the world—stands head and shoulders above all others in quality. The new General Motors cars all help to prove Fisher leadership.

Buddy Knew Price He'd Have to Pay

Their parents were giving an elaborate luncheon and little Buddy and Harriet had been told that when they came home from school they should come in quietly through the back door, leave their books and go out again.

This they did, and on the kitchen table saw the glittering array of frail cups and saucers, the best china plates, and silver trays of iced cakes, all yellow, made with special thought to carry out a color scheme.

"Oh, the Dickens!" exclaimed Buddy in disgust. "No chocolate ones!" and he started to go outdoors.

Harriet's face fell. "Aren't you going to take any?" she wanted to know.

"I am not," declared Buddy. "I ain't afraid to, but they don't look good enough to be whipped for."

Rabbits and Frogs "Game"

For the first time in history cotton-tail rabbits and frogs are to receive protection in Washington, the commission having fixed an open and closed season for each.

Rabbits are now considered as game in most states, and some eastern states annually purchase thousands of them for stocking purposes. Frogs are of great commercial value as a food product, for bait and are useful as insect consumers.

Feasted on Giant Catfish

Some of the employees of a chair company near Owensboro, Ky., had a feast of catfish at their homes, after a 30-pound fish was found swimming about in a small pool of water in a hollow log, taken from Green river to the chair factory to be saved into chair stock. The fish was discovered just as the timber was about to be cut up.

Little Audrey's Acumen

While little Audrey was spending the afternoon in the country her aunt called to the pet pig, "Here, Hortense! Here, Hortense!"

Little Audrey just laughed and laughed, for she had learned some time before that the piggy was not a "Hortense," but a "Eustace."—Kansas City Star.

News of Menlo Park

New Institution of Learning
It was rumored in town yesterday that another educational institution is to locate in Menlo Park, famed for its schools and institutions of learning. In close proximity to Stanford University, St. Patrick's Seminary, Sacred Heart College, the Menlo School for boys, a private school for special training in the old Coleman mansion. The institution to come is from the east.

School Opens August 23
The Las Lomas School will open on August 23 instead of a week later as previously planned. The change was made to make the opening date correspond with the opening date of the high school.

Moved to Redwood City
Andrew Lawler, wife and child, have moved to their new home in Redwood Highland. The other members of the Lawler family will continue to occupy the residence here.

Vacationing At Lake Tahoe
Mrs. D. E. O'Keefe and daughter, Carmel, have gone to Lake Tahoe for a short visit. While there they will be guests at the Tahoe Tavern.

Come To Santa Cruz
J. M. Welch, wife and two children and Miss Bertha Kuck, have gone to Santa Cruz for a ten days vacation.

Candidate Visits Town
Joe Dickey, a candidate for county treasurer, was in town Wednesday soliciting votes. Joe has a big following in Menlo Park where he is sure to secure a big vote.

S. P. Agent Rushed
The Southern Pacific agent here and his assistants are kept on the jump now-a-days on account of the vast amount of material arriving for the base hospital, where a million dollars is to be spent in new buildings. All the material for the construction of these buildings will be shipped from here to the institution, hence the activity.

At the New Menlo Theatre
"Seven Sinners," with Marie Prevost and Charles Conklin. This is a comedy riot. It will be shown this evening in the New Menlo Theatre. "Dancer of Paris," the adventures of Marie and comedy, "Should Sailors Marry," will be the program for tomorrow evening, while on Monday and Tuesday evening, "Spook Ranch," with Host Gibson and a comedy, "Whose Boss," will be screened.

Big Street Dance Tonight
The big street dance and carnival, under the auspices of the Native Sons and Daughters will take place this evening on Santa Cruz avenue, opposite the postoffice.

Lawsuit Affects Holdings
The contemplated lawsuit over the Hopkins will likely affect the big Hopkins holdings here, which, it is said, is soon to be subdivided and placed on the market in small parcels. It is hardly possible that the ancient document will be made to stick. For at a luncheon at her home the status of limitations has run against it, but on account of the fabulous sum involved, the attorneys are likely to discover some long forgotten statute having a bearing on the case sufficient to bring the matter into court. In Derry, Gertrude Kavanaugh, Frances Maloney, Jennie Michel, Flor involved in litigation for some time.

MRS. ELSA MCGINN SPEAKER AT MEETINGS

Entering the last month of her campaign for election as San Mateo county's representative in the State Legislature, Elsa McGinn of San Mateo addressed two meetings this week.

At the first of this week's meetings, Mrs. McGinn was introduced by political leaders of the coast-side district. The meeting was called at the Barstott ranch under the auspices of the McGinn For Assembly Club of Purissima and was attended by more than 50 voters of the Purissima district, who pledged their support to the candidacy of the San Mateo woman.

Mrs. McGinn spoke on a program of good roads and the need for stocking San Mateo county streams with fish, recently taken up by the San Mateo County Sportsmen's Club. "Good roads, especially into the great scenic regions of the mountain districts, are among the greatest needs of San Mateo county for bringing an increasing number of visitors who annually bring thousands of dollars and aid in development of business and prosperity in all parts of the county," said Mrs. McGinn.

The woman candidate was also among the speakers at the recent meeting of the South San Francisco Exchange Club at the California Golf Club, near South San Francisco, when the charter was presented to the South San Francisco club. Mrs. McGinn is a charter member of the San Mateo Burlingame club.

MOVIES

"VARIETY" SAID TO BE DISTINCTLY DIFFERENT

"Variety," is distinctly different from any thing that's been shown in the Sequoia Theatre during the past five years. The film opens on a prisoner—old discouraged and weary—telling his story to the warden. We then "flash back," and the man's tale takes place before the eyes of the audience.

It seems that once on a time, twenty long years ago, this man had been a member of the world's greatest acrobatic act. They were prime favorites at the Berlin Winter Garden. Hundreds had applauded them each day.

Then—something happened which spelt the beginning of the end. The prisoner's partner had made love to his pretty wife. And she, faithless, had returned the affection, completely forgetting her husband. Things went along quietly until some one whispered in his ear telling of her faithlessness.

That night—high over the heads of a huge audience—he had debated whether or not to kill the man who had stolen his wife. Just a movement of a single finger—and he'd be rid of him. What should he do? Looking down, a shadowy face seemed to say, "No." Thoughts kept running through his head—but the act continued as usual. Now the audience was applauding. Bowing, they ran off. But hours later, he could stand it no longer. This man—snake, viper—had stolen his wife—worse than a thief—he deserved no pity or justice. And so—he had killed him.

Then the scene fades out and we find ourselves once more in a dark room with the prisoner and warden. The official tells him a pardon has been granted—he is free.

There—that's "Variety"! Imagine what you're going to see. Scenes behind the stage. On the trapeze at the Winter Garden. Marvelous acting of the principals—Emil Jannings and Lya de Putti. Great direction of E. A. Dupont. The "Griffith of Germany," and marvelous photography.

From advices received, "Variety" is said to be the finest film that has ever left the cinema studios. It comes to the Sequoia Theatre next Monday and Tuesday, August 9 and 10.

PRODUCTION MADE IN LONDON TELLS TALE OF ENGLAND'S BEST LOVED ACTRESS

A distinct novelty will occupy the feature place on the program at the Sequoia Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday, August 11 and 12. In "Nell Gwyn," which stars Dorothy Gish, we have an international production of one of the world's most celebrated true-life love tales. The picture was produced in London by Herbert Wilcox, a young English director-genius. The supporting cast includes three of the best-known artists on the London stage, Randle Ayrton, Juliette Compton and Sidney Fairbrother.

The role of "Nell Gwyn," known in theatrical lore as a test part for actresses, just as "Hamlet" is for actors, has been played by many of the greatest women thespians. It was last essayed in this country by Mary Pickford, who appeared in "Miss Nell," which was produced by Famous Players in 1914. "Pretty, witty, Nelly," who started life in direct poverty and rose to be a king's favorite, and the greatest actress of her time, is a character so full of life as to be a whole show in herself. Miss Gish's rendition of the role has been acclaimed by critics as one of the finest interpretations ever seen—a tempestuous character study in which laughter, passion and tears are magically blended into real entertainment.
